

What is the BND Institute Summer Media Camp at St. Andrew's School?

Now in its second year, the BND Institute of Media and Culture's 2019 Summer Media Camp combines journalism and multi-platform media technology for Richmond, Va. -area students in grades 6 through 12 to create and display their work via an online presence. The camp is led by Bonnie Newman Davis, M.A. Journalism, who has more than 35 years experience as a newspaper and online journalist and university professor. Working alongside Ms. Davis is Erin Danielle Stanley, MSW, who has served as a teacher and social worker for school systems in Atlanta, Chicago and Washington, D.C. Dexter Johnson, a Hampton University graduate and multimedia journalist, also will work with Ms. Davis and Ms. Stanley.

We are thrilled to say that one of this year's camp will take place July 15-26, 2019 at St. Andrews School, 227 S Cherry St., Richmond, VA 23220. The St. Andrew's media camp is designed for students in 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th grades. The cost is $120 per student for two weeks, and students are encouraged to register no later than June 30, 2019. We are excited to offer up to eight (8) scholarships for the St. Andrew's camp, which means eligible students can attend the camp at no cost!

During the two-week camp, students will build their confidence as they learn about media literacy and gain more awareness about their individual and collective communities. This two-week program will tap into and explore students' creativity, writing, editing and video skills. Students will work with professional media writers, editors, videographers and special guests who will lead them through various aspects of digital storytelling.

Besides the technical skills students develop, we include time for field trips to local media outlets and to the Newseum in Washington, D.C. Such outings enlighten our students about news media operations and enable them to meet professionals in an industry in which they one day may work.
